2. NO PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERING ADVICE

DISCLAIMER: Content published on StruviaCore is NOT a substitute for professional engineering advice, assessment, or design. Do not apply any content from this website to a real project without independent review by a licensed engineer.

2.1 Nature of Published Content

StruviaCore publishes articles, guides, tutorials, and reference materials covering topics in structural engineering, civil engineering, geotechnical engineering, construction technology, and related disciplines. This content is intended to educate, inform, and provide general technical background to a broad audience that includes students, professionals, researchers, and the general public.

The technical content on this website is written for educational purposes and general awareness only. It reflects general principles and may be simplified for accessibility. It does not account for the specific conditions, constraints, materials, regulations, loading scenarios, soil profiles, or other project-specific variables that must be considered in any real-world engineering application.

Any such professional relationship may only be established through a formal, written service agreement executed between you and StruviaCore.

2.3 Consult a Licensed Professional

For any specific engineering project, structural assessment, design work, geotechnical investigation, or construction activity, you must engage a licensed and qualified engineering professional who is registered with the Council for the Regulation of Engineering in Nigeria (COREN) or the relevant professional regulatory body in your jurisdiction.

2.4 Applicable Engineering Standards

Engineering codes, design standards, specifications, and regulatory requirements are subject to periodic revision and vary by jurisdiction. While StruviaCore endeavours to reference current and relevant standards (including British Standards, Eurocodes, and Nigerian building regulations where applicable), we cannot guarantee that all cited standards are the most current version in force at the time you read them. You are solely responsible for verifying the current applicable version of any standard for your specific project and jurisdiction.

3. ACCURACY AND CONTENT DISCLAIMER
